Palestine Colony To Bear Name Of Massachusetts

Delegates to the New England Jewish National Fund conference voted at Boston to establish in Palestine a colony bearing the name of Massachusetts, where refugees and demobilized soldiers could be settled.

Governor Saltonstall sent this message:

"The establishment of this colony in Palestine will serve to associate democratic ideals of the founding fathers of our commonwealth with the Jewish pioneers who are laying the foundation of the Jewish homeland upon the sacred soil of their fathers. This act on the part of the Jewish National Fund of New England is a manifestation of faith in the triumph of the cause of the United Nations and the future of Palestine."

The action was taken following addresses by Mrs. Archibald Silverman of Providence, Mendel N. Fisher of New York, Jewish National Fund executive director; and Elihu D. Stone of Boston, national honorary vice-president.

Resolutions were adopted appealing to President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill for fulfillment of the Balfour Declaration to facilitate large-scale settlement and speedy colonization of Jews in a post-war program.

Dr. Arthur I. Shaine of Boston was re-elected New England president of the fund and Max Nigrosh was re-elected Greater Boston president.

Zionist Army Of All Jews, States Publisher

Arthur Hays Sulzberger, president and publisher of "The New York Times," called upon Jews and non-Jews who have supported Zionist aims to abandon their efforts for a Jewish army unit from Palestine and the post-war establishment of a Jewish national state in the Holy Land.

He pointed out that Zionist aims did not represent the desires of all Jews, and that to establish an army such as proposed would be a formidable military task in the crucial Mediterranean area where "this kind of diversion is unthinkable."

In an address before the Brotherhood of the Madison Avenue Temple, in Baltimore, Md., Mr. Sulzberger declared that pro-Zionist efforts were helping "to create problems to the Moslem world which needs all of the allied [illegible] and, [illegible] considered, it will not help win the war to meet the demand for a separate Jewish army. Furthermore, the United States government has evidently not felt it either wise or expedient to intervene with the British government in this matter.

"It seems to me, therefore, that since those decisions have been made—and I think made with a conviction that will not be changed, at least during this war — it serves no useful purpose to continue, at this time, a campaign

Hooded Men Set Fire To Kill Jewish Teacher

Residents of Sanborn, N.Y., are seeking a building to house sixty-seven pupils who were left without classrooms by a fire that destroyed their schoolhouse and was evidently set to cremate their principal.

The principal, Milton Gurvitz, twenty-two years old, told state police the fire was started by two hooded, armed men who, he said, left him bound and gagged in the building before setting a match to alcohol which he reported they sprinkled on the floor.

Mr. Gurvitz was quoted by Eugene F. Hoyt, state police inspector, as saying that he had received two notes telling him to get out of town. One of them, Inspector Hoyt asserted, was signed, "100 per cent American" and the other unsigned, said: "We don't want a Jew around."

The principal had "an excellent record" at Buffalo Teachers' College—"was in the highest ten of his class, President Harry Rockwell said. "We have not had in the past any criticism of him whatever. We have worked with him and lived with him."

Dutch People Try To Help Jews

The first eye-witness account of the rounding-up of Jews in Amsterdam for deportation to occupied Poland and Russia, which was received in Dutch quarters in London, is quoted in the Daily Telegraph.

"In the Nieuwe Kerkstraat," I saw how an old woman who clung to her arrested son was beaten repeatedly by a German policeman with the butt of his rifle until she collapsed.

"A woman carried her child in her arms when she was arrested. It was taken from her and simply thrown down on the pavement. Everywhere people were being beaten, kicked, or dragged down the stairs and through the streets.

"As the day went on the three Jewish quarters of Amsterdam were cordoned by the Green Police, brought from Germany. Jews between 15½ and 40 were arrested. Where they refused to leave their houses, or were incapable of doing so, the police forced an entrance and dragged them out. Later all the arrested were marched off in large groups."

The Dutch Nazi paper De Storm complains about the ingenious ways in which non-Jews are helping Jews to evade the Jew laws. As Jews are forbidden to stay in hotels and boarding-houses at holiday resorts, non-Jews living there put their houses at the Jews' disposal while they themselves move into the hotels and boarding houses. Non-Jews also shop for Jews during the hours when the latter are forbidden to shop. The Christian "saboteurs," says the paper, are encouraged by the Protestant and Catholic clergy whose political activities" should be studied because they contribute to the [illegible] of the Christian Church as an instrument against the Jews and try to help them whenever possible is also admitted by Max Blokzijl, the official Dutch radio commentator. In a special broadcast denouncing Dutch sympathy for the Jews, he said: "If people in the Netherlands seem to have taken some fancy for the Jews, and openly demonstrate their friendly feelings for them, they do so far less from sympathy for the Jews than from sheer pleasure in annoying the Germans."

One thousand Dutch children, aged between six and ten, mostly belonging to Jewish families were taken as hostages by the Gestapo. The reason given is the wave of sabotage now moving over Holland.

Seyss-Inquart, the Nazi Commissioner in the Netherlands, sent four Dutch Christians to a concentration camp for helping Jews to escape deportation. The Deutsche Zeitung In Den Niederlanden published these sentences prominently with the comment that such firm action ought to sober up other "sentimental Aryans."

Refugees Organize In Australia

An Association of Jewish Refugees has been formed in Australia with the approval of the appropriate Commonwealth authorities. The Association will officially represent refugees and membership will be open to all Jewish refugees from Germany and Austria and to other Jewish victims of Nazi oppression whose interests coincide with the objects of the Association.

Formation of the new body follows negotiations with the authorities and is a direct result of the long-standing demand in refugee circles for self-representation.

Foremost among its aims will be to make clear to the authorities and to the general public that Jewish refugees are unconditionally opposed to Nazi Germany and all powers allied with it and to ensure that consequent recognition is given to refugees in legal enactment and in their political status.

The Association will strive to enable Jewish refugees to freely participate in the life, work and responsibilities of the Australian community and generally will seek to carry out such functions as will lead to the furtherance of the Association's objects, concerned as these are with the well-being of Jewish refugees.

FRENCHMEN IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE PETITION VICHY TO HALT ROUND-UP OF JEWISH CHILDREN

YOUNGSTERS, TAKEN FROM MOTHERS, LOSE IDENTITY UNDER NEW NAMES IN CONCENTRATION CAMPS

Frenchmen in all walks of life in unoccupied France are petitioning the Vichy Government to urge a halt of the activities of the Gestapo in the France administered from Paris, for their last phase of anti-Semitism. This is the rounding up of 4,000 Jewish children and sending them to the concentration camps of Pithiviers, Beaune-la-Rolande, and Drancy in Germany, where their identity, not only as Jewish but French, is obliterated in the Nazi human melting pots.

Advices which have reached The Sunday Times of London, England, from over the French frontier, term the "rounding up" a clear case of "kidnapping," which begins with the taking away from the victims of all documents and other identity proofs, packing them into railway trains in the sight of their distracted mothers, and then, in the German camps, registering them under German names.

It is added that the protests lodged with the Vichy Government went unheeded.

The Parisher Zeitung, the organ of the Nazi occupation authorities in France, has published a furious attack on French pro-Jews. It alleges that there exists in both zones a secret non-Jewish organization of "Friends of the Yellow Star of David," which embraces large numbers of Frenchmen and is headed in Paris by Bishop Chaptal.

The organization says the Nazis who belong to the organization continually preach in their sermons that the Star of David must be honored, that the Jews deserve the full sympathy and help of the Christians, and that anti-Semitism is only a product imported from Nazi Germany to poison the minds of the French people. The Nazi organ demands the immediate suppression of the pro-Jewish movement, which "constitutes a great obstacle to the development of friendly relations between France and Germany."

Nevertheless, according to all reports, the wave of protests in France against the deportation of Jews is still growing. The Chamber of French lawyers, the Medical Association, and many other organizations have joined in the protests, says the London Jewish Chronicle. In Marseilles, Toulouse, and other towns, funds are being raised by non-Jews and clothes and food are being collected for the benefit of the Jewish fugitives hiding in non-Jewish homes. The movement to give shelter to the Jews has assumed an organized character in many towns. The London Daily Telegraph declares that many priests and pons have followed the example of Mgr. Chapital in wearing the Star of David as a protest.

The Vichy Cabinet is reported to have discussed the numerous protests against the deportations, including one from the Alsace-Lorraine Union in Switzerland. It is stated that two Ministers, Barthelemy and Romier, strongly attacked the deportations, and threatened to resign, but Laval remained unmoved. Laval is now giving awards to his special police engaged in hunting the Jews hiding in woods, in French homes, and near the Swiss frontier. In many cases Jews trapped by Laval's police committed suicide rather than be sent to Germany.

In some of the camps in the unoccupied zone many noted German Jewish refugees, including scientists, are still kept in readiness for deportation to Germany. Even a number of baptized Jews of foreign origin have been deported.

In France, according to the Neue Zuercher Zeitung, the deportation of Jews from the occupied and unoccupied zones is connected with Germany's labour requirements. According to this version, deportees, so far as they are capable of work, will be employed in certain mines; as happened months ago to a number of deported Dutch Jews. (These are the notorious Mauthausen mines in Austria).

Paris police rounded up 4,000 Rumanian men and women Jews and removed them from the city. This raid was kept secret, and most of the victims were caught at home. They were allowed to take some clothing, and food for two days only.

A Swiss doctor, who returned on September 15 from a long trip in France, reports in the Tribune De Geneve that a Jewish chemist, decorated in the war, told him how all Jews in his district had been arrested, even those who had been naturalised since 1936. A woman threw herself with her two children out of a window, and another strangled her child when arrested. In a town near Sete, Jews hid in a wood, and the French police searching the wood found only hanging bodies. In one small place, the doctor was shown a train of cattle-trucks for deporting the Jews. Inscribed in white letters on the train were the words: "Property of the Wehrmacht. Any person trying to open this truck will be shot."

Die Tagwacht, of Berne, reports that the internment camp at Rivesaltes, in the Pyrenees, has been made a central collection camp for Jews from the unoccupied zone. Rivesaltes is considered from the hygienic standpoint to be the worst of all the camps. Here it is decided who will be deported, and future refugee trains leave for the east from here. Thus the Jewish persecution, the paper comments, has [illegible] by decrees. The persecution is now being intensified.

Persons now at Rivesaltes include some outstanding intellectuals. Some 300 still remain at Les Milles camp, one half being non-Jews, and the other half Jews from neutral countries friendly to the Axis. The French public generally expects fresh mass arrests, including those of thousands of Jews who evaded the police, and the persons aiding them.

The Vichy Government press and radio, obviously acting on the orders of the Propaganda Ministry, is now trying desperately to stem the tide of popular sympathy for the persecuted Jews. A spokesman of the Commissariat for Jewish Affairs broadcasting from Toulouse, sought to blame the failure of all Petain's social, economic, and political "reforms" on the Government's disinclination to tackle the Jewish problem until now. "The prerequisite for the emancipation of the French people," the speaker said, "is that the people must learn to treat the Jews as foreigners — dangerous foreigners."

A Vichy station calling itself "Radio Revolution" tried to hide the Government's chagrin over the increasing number of Frenchmen escaping to join General de Gaulle's Fighting French committee by calling M. Vaillo, who is one of the latest recruits, a Jew. "Why should not Monseigneur Saliege, Archbishop of Toulouse, the staunch defender of the Jews," the announcer asked, "follow the Jew Gruenbaum-Vaillo to London?"

Searches in monasteries led to many arrests. Many refugees have had to leave their hiding places owing to non-renewal of the monthly ration-cards. No foreigner whose name figures on the deportation lists can obtain a labour permit.

Some officials, despite active co-operation in the anti-Jewish measures, have been summarily dismissed for "excessive sentiments" for the Jews, especially. The [illegible] through all

Jews: German, Austrian, Czechoslovak, Polish, Estonian, Lithuanian, Latvian, Danzig, and Soviet nations, as well as stateless persons and White Russians were to be deported. Without any consideration of their personal situation, all Jews who arrived in France after January 1, 1936, were included, with the exception of persons over 60; sick persons who could not be transported; obviously pregnant women; parents of children under two; persons married to a French national or having a child with French nationality; persons who figured on a special "political deportation list, and [illegible] particularly distinguished themselves in the French Army. (An instruction dated August 29 showed that this meant only those who had won the Medaille Militaire or the Legion of Honour at the front.)

On August 28, Prefects were further instructed that they could take persons up to 62 years in order to fulfil the quotas. All persons without exception originating from Holland, Belgium, or Luxembourg, who secretly left occupied territory, were also to be handed over, as well as those who arrived in France after 1933, and were placed in forced residence or secretly left the occupied zone; all internees; all who were the object of prosecution; all unmarried persons between 16 and 40; and all foreign workers and their families registered in France since 1933.

As for their families, the line laid down was that persons over 60 whose relatives had been deported could either accompany them or remain in France. Very sick people could remain, but their relatives would be deported. Husbands of pregnant women, and their children under 16; and parents of children under two and their brothers and sisters under 16, could also remain. If the husband is French, the whole family could remain. But if a person figured in the "political delivery" list, the whole family was deported.

Frenchmen have been officially admonished that they are expected to hate the Jews, and that they must stop criticising the Government's anti-Jewish persecutions, reports the London Jewish Chronicle.

In a broadcast statement by Darquier de Pellepoix, the Vichy Commissioner for Jewish Affairs, complaint is made that "naive Frenchmen, without realizing that they are influenced by Jewish propaganda, are continually talking about the 'good Jew.' One can hear such sentences: 'But there are good Jews, my dear friend; yes, there are. I know a Levy, an Israel, a Dreyfus, etc. There are good and bad, as everywhere else.'"

"For all Frenchmen who have understood that the Jewish problem is a collective problem," declares Pellepoix, "the question no longer arises. The Jew must not interest Frenchmen individually. To be anti-Jewish is to support national defence. Jewry invaded and oppressed France, and led her from disaster to disaster. [illegible] enemies of France, not because they are good or bad, but because they are Jews. It is strange that Frenchmen could have thought otherwise, while throughout the numerous wars which have continually opposed racially allied nations, it has never been thought that an enemy should be spared under the pretext that he was perhaps a good citizen, a good father or an honest trader."

When 760 Jewish children deported from France recently passed Aachen in the direction of Cologne, bound for an unknown destination, the Berlin Jewish communal leaders applied to the German Government for permission to send delegates to railway stations in Germany to distribute food to the children. Their request was turned down.

It is reported that the children travelled herded together in eight vans of a goods train, and their deportation was carried out at night, possibly to avoid pro-Jewish demonstrations.

A Family Narrative

Adolf Hitler in "Mein Kampf" has stated that the "Jewish International" is the subtle means by which the Jews plot to rule the world and that the "Protocols of Zion" are the Exhibits A, B and C of so nefarious a crime.

A little story which I wish to relate might not interest Adolf Hitler or his satellites, but its history of human suffering and tragedy might stir those who have pity in their hearts and aspire to Freedom in a New World.

It is a story, typical of tens of thousands, others perhaps a little happier — yet all tainted with that same strain of fear and uncertainty — like a man feeling his way through the unknown.

The moral of the story is contained in itself and for those who have eyes to see and a heart to feel its poignancy should be sufficient.

In the year 1842—in the Polish city of Lodz—my father's father, Schloime Breitstein, was born. His father before him was a God-fearing and pious Jew, and his son following in his ways placed orthodoxy and righteousness above most things in life.

Yet this devout nature did not rob my grandfather from seeking and finding his materialistic "bread and butter," which resulted in his apprenticeship as a coachmaker — the "mechanic" of those days.

Soon the man progressed and after marrying, he himself became a "master," and the concern of Breitstein's, coachmakers, Lodz, was formed.

True the business was indeed yet humble, but the young man had faith and his means prospered.

Years passed and Schloime was blessed with numerous offspring in the form of seven children — five sons and two daughters.

But then social and financial worries began to furrow the brow of my grandfather, for with the [illegible] political changes were fast occurring, and the threatening eagle-headed "monster" of Tsarism began to torment its hapless victims.

The ghetto in Lodz became the favourite spot for periodic exhibitions of lust and hate, performed by the upholders of Tsarism, and the ever-worsening pogroms against the Jews reached a new "high," culminating in the atrocities and excesses of the "Rabbinik," when thousands of peasants, students and workers, aroused by agitators, gathered in the market square.

Years of anxiety dispelled themselves once again and the sons of Schloime aspired to manhood. A new era dawned as the young men toiled with their father, who now worked exclusively for the "Poretz" or "Lord of the Manor."

Suddenly, however, the "monster" struck again and claimed the sons for military service.

This "monster" which had destroyed and ravaged and had given nothing but misery and unhappiness, wished to claim everything — yes, everything — because without them the business would disintegrate and honest labour was hard to find. Still worse, a Jew in the Tsarist service became less than a number — he became the "whipping-post" of a corrupt and cruel authority, whose sole aim became the grinding down of mind and body.

But then a major tragedy descended upon the family. The eldest son Isaac had already married and taken control of his father's business.

Now in the employ of Isaac there was a certain Saul Gross — a half-demented water-carrier, who was pitied and succoured in his plight.

One holiday, whilst Isaac and his family and many relatives staying as guests, retired early, this half-witted suddenly became crazy to go to the U.S.A. and thinking that affluent wealth lay hidden in the "kasse" or safe, he tried to burst it and take possession of its contents.

Isaac heard the loud noises below and began to descend, only to be faced by the crazed visage of Gross, armed with a huge wood-chopper's axe. Before he could question the man, he had been felled by the stroke of a madman. Gross had been unable to force the safe and thinking the others above might be terrorised into divulging the secret, he rushed to the bedrooms, only to find panic-stricken women and children, at which he became absolutely mad, and losing his head completely he murdered seven members of the family in cold blood. Thereupon he ran to his father's house and told him of the terrible crime he had committed, threatening him with a similar fate if he refused him £30 to escape.

Mortally afraid, the old man gave the money and Gross disappeared into the night. But Isaac, possessed of great strength, recovered and lived to remember the awful deed, although he was now a cripple for life.

Before military service claimed the sons, it was decided that the boys should emigrate and my father, Herschel, and his four brothers came to Manchester. But this was not the first exodus of the family. A previous migration had occurred, as will be shown later, when Aaron Breitstein, a relative of my grandfather, had gone to London and later to Johannesburg, South Africa.

My father soon changed his trade because very few if any Jews were wheelwrights or coachmakers, and secondly he was obstructed by a language handicap, and so the brothers became tailors —the historical legacy of so many of our race.

Happiness had again returned to the family in this liberal England, so free and pleasant, where a man was not ground down because he differed socially or politically from others. Back in Lodz my grandfather expired and my grandmother with her two daughters came to Manchester. On rolled the happy years and the young men in turn married and had children. Life was a song—in a major key.

David, the second eldest son, now decided to pack his bags and sail for New York, whilst Abraham, the third son, decided that as the remaining bachelor he would try his luck in Paris.

Refugees In Britain Inscribe Names Of Synagogues In Golden Book

Chief Rabbi J. H. Hertz, of London, England, called on the Jews of all countries to contribute their share at once toward the defeat on the Russian battlefields of "the murderer and destroyer of peoples and countries, the exterminator of the Jewish people."

Dr. Hertz was speaking at a United Jewish Committee meeting held in behalf of the Aid to Russia Fund. He declared Russia was the first country where anti-Semitism was outlawed.

The Bishop of Chelmsford, who opened the meeting, said: "If the Russians had not come to our aid there would have been many years of conflict, but today the whole prospect has been changed for us."

The memory of 1,000 synagogues burned down by the Nazis in Germany and Austria on the night of Nov. 9-10, 1938, was perpetuated this Monday, when thousands of Jewish refugees from those countries now living in Britain inscribed the names of their synagogues in the Golden Book of the Jewish National Fund.

"It's all bunk — plain and unadulterated," Dr. Rudolf Pintner, non-Jewish professor of psychology at Columbia University in answer to the question whether there was any scientific basis for the charge that loudness, vulgarity, money-mindedness, etc. were "Jewish traits."

Shmarjahu Gorelik, noted Jewish journalist, died in Tel-Aviv.

Flight Lieutenant Philip Meyer Davis, of the Royal Air Force, son of Lady Henrietta Davis, of Montreal, and the late Sir Mortimer Davis has been reported killed in action, according to a letter from R.A.F. Headquarters which reached his mother. Flight Lieutenant Davis had been practicing as a solicitor in Great Britain before the outbreak of the war. He enlisted in the R.A.F. and was one of four British airmen who were named King's Messengers.

Sergeant Navigator Leonard G. Feldman of Windsor is one of five airmen who were aboard an R.C.A.F. plane which was reported missing from its Newfoundland station.

After Forty Years, A Jew Is Again Lord Mayor Of London

Alderman Sir Samuel George Joseph was elected Lord Mayor of London for the ensuing year by the Court of Aldermen, sitting at the Guildhall on Tuesday.

There were, as is customary, two final nominations, Alderman Sir Frank Pollitzer and Sir Samuel Joseph. The choice fell on the latter. Both are Jews. It is exactly 40 years since a Jew was Lord Mayor of London.

Sir Samuel George Joseph, who is 54 years of age, is Co-Chairman and Managing Director of Bovis, Ltd., a well-known firm of building contractors. For some time before his election as Alderman of the Portsoken Ward in 1933 he was a representative of the Ward at Guild Hayward on the Common Council at the Guildhall. He was elected Sheriff in June, 1938, and was knighted at the end of his Shrieval year.

During the last war Sir Samuel was a Captain in the Royal Irish Regiment and acted as Staff Captain, serving in Salonika, Egypt, and France, and being twice mentioned in dispatches. He is Hon. Colonel of the 56th (1st London) Divisional Royal Engineers, and has been twice Mayor of St. Marylebone, 1928-30. He is a Liveryman of the Cutlers', Lorimers', and Carmen's Companies.

The Portsoken Ward, of which the Lord Mayor-elect is the Alderman, comprises Houndsditch, Minories, and part of Middlesex Street.

The last Jewish Lord Mayor, who held that exalted office in 1902-3, Sir Marcus Samuel (afterwards Lord Bearsted), was also the Alderman of the Portsoken Ward. On that occasion, the famous procession, the Lord Mayor's Show, travelled, during its traditional journey, through "Petticoat Lane."

Hershoran-Sapera

The marriage of Rhodelle, daughter of L. F. Sapera, of Fort William, to Second Lieutenant Jack Hershoran, 25th Light Anti-Aircraft Artillery, son of Mrs. Rebecca Hershoran, of Toronto, was solemnized in St. John, N.B. The bride wore a two-piece suit of blue wool crepe, with matching pillbox hat and wine colored veil, and carried yellow roses and bouvardia. Mrs. George Helber was matron of honor, and George Helber was best man. The couple will live in St. John. The groom attended Oakwood Collegiate, and is a graduate (1940) of the University of Toronto. He is a member of Beta Sigma Rho fraternity.

Garr-Frankel

The marriage of Minnie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Frankel, Lippincott Street, to L. A. C. Boris Garr, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Garr, Brunswick Avenue, took place on October 11th, at Ohrovtzar Synagogue, Cantor B. Wisdowsky officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her parents, and wore a gown with lame top and white net skirt with lame appliques, fashioned on torso lines, and sweetheart neckline. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion fell from a crown of lame matching her dress, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and bouvardia with white and silver streamers. Miss Tillie Frankel, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, in a gypsy fuchsia gown with matching headdress, and cascade bouquet of Talisman roses. The bridesmaids were: Mrs. Gerald Iscove, formerly Freda Garr, in blue taffet and net; Misses Toby Margolis, in mauve taffeta and net; and Ruth Starr, in blue taffeta and net, all carrying cascade bouquets of pink roses. Joseph Garr, brother of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were: Gerald Iscove, Reuben Frankel, and Sydney Applebaum. At the dinner at the Belvin, the bride's mother received in a sky blue chiffon gown, with corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Garr, mother of the groom, wore a blue lace and crepe gown, with a corsage of red roses. The couple left for Montreal, the bride wearing a brown tailored suit and tweed coat, with matching accessories. Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Katz, of Hamilton; and Mrs. S. Zarowitz, of Philadelphia, Pa.

Mrs. Irving Goodman was Irene Stulberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Stulberg, Oxford Street, Toronto. Mr. Goodman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Goodman, College Street.

A Pioneer's Legacy Enriches Others Regardless Of Creed Or Color

By Rabbi Martin M. Weitz, Of Kenosha, Wisconsin

Before the turn of the century Trinidad, Colorado, a mountain town in a hanging valley between Fisher's Peak and Simpson's Rest, with its more than five hundred Jewish residents, had created the solid and substantial Temple Aaron, Colorado's oldest synagogue in continuous use since 1887.

Though Trinidad means "trinity" in Christianity, it suggests a "trio" for Trinidad Jewry, for here a father and two sons, a rabbi, a lawyer and a doctor, established a collective legacy to help enrich and enlarge the lives of thousands, which was crystallized in the Dr. Alfred Freudenthal Memorial Trust Fund and Foundation.

The story of the Freudenthals is the story of Trinidad itself—of those who stayed in Trinidad. Leopold Freudenthal, a graduate of Heidelberg, served Trinidad as Rabbi for twenty-six years until his very last day, July 29, 1916. He gave stamina and spirit not only to Temple Aaron but to Trinidad at large through his aid to the school board and all civic groups. He was indeed a pioneer teacher to pioneer Jews of the West, as well as an ambassador of good will in the court of public opinion.

His two sons also chose to live their lives in the light and shadow of Temple Aaron. Sam Freudenthal, attorney and state legislator, had his father's thirst for knowledge and hunger for wisdom and labored in his father's spirit by securing books for Trinidad's libraries, establishing junior colleges throughout the state, and bringing to his native city Colorado's first junior college in 1927. The last of the Freudenthals, Dr. Alfred Freudenthal, in his sixty-one years (b. June 14, 1879; d. December 20, 1940) was truly the "man who stayed in Trinidad," for he preferred to minister to the health of the thousands who knew his father rather than to accept the teaching offers of great universities. His life was a "Doctor's Odyssey" and he labored among scores of nationalities and religious fellowships. He rarely charged more than a few dollars per annum — a pioneer personal health "plan."

Nevertheless, he left a sizable legacy, his own plus his brother's and his father's, to "Religion and Democracy" in the state that made possible their livelihoods. This estate is administered by a "trio" of executors, Jew, Catholic, Protestant. By far the largest portion has been assigned to Temple Aaron to be administered by its three officers. Thus, the designation of Temple Aaron as major beneficiary, in reality, makes its board the guiding force of the Alfred Freudenthal Memorial Foundation.

By a "believe it or not" coincidence, the three directors of the Temple are sons of the three pioneers who founded Temple Aaron and invited Rabbi Freudenthal to Trinidad. Their family names go beyond that of the Freudenthals in Trinidad's history and they, too, have labored for Judaism and Americanism.

Gilbert Sanders, President of Temple Aaron and of the Freudenthal Foundation, at present also serves as President of the Aaron Cemetery Association; treasurer of the U.S.O.; coordinator of Civilian Defense, and members of the State Council of Defense; chairman of Las Animas County Child Welfare Association; secretary of the Las Animas Bar; United States Conciliator in Bankruptcy; lay-rabbi for many years, and member of the Board of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

Albert Moses, secretary of the Temple and the Foundation, has served as organist for the congregation for over forty years. Leo Gottlieb is vice-president of the Temple and Foundation, succeeding the late Dr. Alfred Freudenthal. This "trio" of officers continue not only the terms but also the spirit of the legacy, paralleling as closely as possible the labors of the rabbi-father and the lawyer-doctor-sons.

The Freudenthal Foundation indeed serves as a workshop of Brotherhood—for faith and freedom, for religion and democracy, for it has helped Catholics to establish a children's playground, Episcopalians to pay for pavement taxes, Presbyterians to enjoy newly painted walls, Lutherans to have a new roof over their heads, and Negroes to have a new floor under their feet. It has aided all five service clubs in Trinidad, embracing Catholics, Protestants, and Jews.

It has engaged in good-will efforts generally by aiding underprivileged children, by subsidizing the Civilian Defense Council, by assisting the Boy Scouts, by contributing to playgrounds, the library and the junior college, and by awarding books and scholarships. The Temple itself has been redecorated and opened to the public as a meeting place for civic groups.

All of these awards were strictly local until this summer when, at the behest of the writer and by the unanimous consent of all the directors, $500.00 was voted to the Jewish Chautauqua Society, the first non-local and initial Jewish assignment.

It is hoped that this appropriation which is helping to bring J.C.S. speakers to all the colleges, junior colleges and universities throughout Colorado may become an annual contribution to the spirit of the Freudenthals and that other legacies in other states will follow the Trinidad example of service to Judaism and Americanism through the enhancement and enrichment of religion and democracy.

ness houses and industrial undertakings have been forced to send notices to their customers that Jews are no longer employed. A typical notice sent out by the firm T. H. Haagen, of Rotterdam, reads: "We regret to announce that Levi Wolf, through circumstances outside both our and his control, will no longer be with us after Friday next."

George Kettman, editor-in-chief of the most violent anti-Semitic paper in Holland, De Misthoorn, and three leading members of the editorial staff have been dismissed from their posts and expelled from the Dutch Nazi Party on orders of the "Leader," Mussert. They were charged with agitation against National Socialism. The dismissals do not mean any abatement of the anti-Semitic campaign, but are said to reflect the rapidly sharpening leadership crisis between the quislings, Mussert and Rost van Tonningen, over the future of Holland.

In Holland, the deportation of Jews for forced labour in Nazi-occupied territories continues unabated. It is now known that some of the Jewish exiles were sent to Birkenau, in Upper Silesia where they are working in labour gangs. The Jewish Council in Amsterdam issued a warning to Jews that they are liable to be deported at very short notice, and that every Jew must therefore hold himself in readiness to leave. Announcing that Jews in Amsterdam and The Hague are forbidden to sit on benches even in the parks, squares, and streets which they are allowed to enter, the Nazis state that offenders will be immediately arrested and put to work in Germany with their families.

Saint John, N.B.

Mrs. D. Boyaner, 53 Elliott Row, St. John, N.B., widow of the late Donald Boyaner, died after a prolonged illness on October 17th, at the age of seventy-three. Mrs. Boyaner was born in Poland, and came to this country over fifty years ago, residing in St. John. She is survived by four sons, Louis and Eli, of St. John; Captain Frank Boyaner, with Canadian Army Overseas; Harry, of Vancouver, B.C.; two daughters, Fanny, wife of L.A.C. Norman Smith, R.C.A.F., and Bertha, wife of Lieutenant M. Emdin, C.A.M.C., serving in Winnipeg, Man.; a sister, Mrs. Samuel Goldfeather; and six grandchildren. The funeral took place on October 19th. Interment was in the Hebrew Ferrihill Cemetery, Rabbi M. I. Rothkin and Hon Fl. Lt. A. Babb conducting the service.

Winning The Peace

A few days ago, Armistice Day or better, Remembrance Day, was observed. We recalled lovingly those who died "to make the world safe for democracy and to crush militarism."

Have these ten million dead of the last war died in vain? We believe not. The tyranny of their own generation they have destroyed. But we, the living failed them. We failed them since November 11th, 1918, in that we were slow and perhaps that we did not possess the spiritual power to build the peace of the world founded on justice. So that while we won the last world war, we nevertheless lost the peace.

How shall we avert a similar catastrophe when victory comes for the cause of the United Nations? Now is the time to prepare ourselves for a great peace offensive. That offensive will have to be armed with the weapons of global morality. All nations will have to be united and bound by a united nations' charter that will give first place to the welfare of the common man be he of whatever race or creed. In this connection we welcome the Armistice Day message issued by The Commission on Justice and Peace of our Central Conference of American Rabbis which lays down seven guiding principles in the building of the just world order:

"We urge: 1. The Universal recognition of the Sovereignty of God, the Father and Creator of All, and the duty of all men to obey His will.

2. The application of the Bill of Rights of the American Constitution to all men, thus making democracy universal, ending all colonial empires, asserting the equality of all races and all individuals, and abolishing all racial and class distinctions. These rights come from God and are, therefore, the inalienable possessions of every person regardless of race, color, creed or station.

3. The creation of an international organization through which all nations would co-operate and to which they would yield some of their national sovereignty.

4. Gradual universal disarmament, and the establishment of an international police force which, subject to international law, could restrain outlaw nations.

5. Placing at the disposal of all men the natural resources of the world, created by God, thus making possible the removal of economic injustice, the full utilization of technological inventions to create the abundant life and the abolition of poverty, slums and insecurity.

6. The institution of a world court where nations, races or individuals with grievances could plead their causes and receive justice.

7. Universal, international and unselfish co-operation in rebuilding the war-torn areas, and in the post-war adjustment of the peoples in all lands."

As we fight for victory let all now pray in the hallowed words of the synagogue ritual: "Grant us peace, Thy most precious gift, O Thou eternal source of peace ... strengthen the bonds of friendship and fellowship among the inhabitants of all lands. Plant virtue in every soul, and may the love of Thy name hallow every home and every heart. Praised be Thou, O Lord, Giver of Peace."

How A Rabbi Disappoints Some People

1. Here is a man who seldom meets with the Rabbi but he is in need of a letter of recommendation. The Rabbi can not truthfully write such a letter.

2. There is the individual who at a Bar-Mitzvah celebration of his son invites his important Gentile business associates and always the banker. He wants the Rabbi to eulogize his great giving, prominence, etc., in the community. That may be good "business" but not good for the dignity of the rabbinate.

3. Then there is the niggardly person who can not endure the Rabbi's appeals for one cause or another associated with giving. His heart "breaks" and it is all the Rabbi's fault.

4. Let the Rabbi protest against laymen who are self-seekers and office-exploiters in the House of God, and such a leader is surely a disappointment.

5. "Why does my Rabbi speak in the cause of the workers, the Negroes, the oppressed and the disinherited? That is all politics. He ought to keep out of politics. He ought to preach good old-time religion." Yes, indeed, the Rabbi whose ministry is prophetic lives dangerously and there are those who will look upon him as a disturber and publicity-seeker.

6. It is for the sake of Jewish honour that the Rabbi is zealous for a lay-leadership that is of the finest from a spiritual and ethical point of view. What a disappointment is such a Rabbi to most people who are worshippers of the Golden Calf!

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rumor
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

Thousands upon thousands of Jewish soldiers gave their lives in the defense of Poland during the Nazi invasion in 1939, and many more thousands of Jewish officers and soldiers were taken prisoners by the invaders. After the conquest of Poland, when the Polish Army was fighting in France, about twelve per cent of the soldiers were Jews. On Russian soil, Jewish war prisoners and refugees made up more than that percentage of the new Polish forces. Lately a report from Kuibyshev said that the Poles were dismissing Jewish soldiers on the claim that they were not physically fit, as a pretext against allowing the Jews to take their families along with them to the Middle East, a privilege which is granted by the Soviet to each member of the Polish armed forces. When approached with regard to this and other discriminations having to do with Jewish soldiers in the Polish Army, the Polish Embassy is said to have shifted the responsibility to the army leaders.

Charges of anti-Semitism in the Polish Army are anything but new. Several months ago the question was raised in the British Parliament by Miss Eleanor Rathbone in connection with Jewish engineering students at a British university on whom pressure was being brought to bear to join the Polish Army. Miss Rathbone exonerated General Sikorski, but said that in some units "there is grievous anti-Semitism, and bullying of men." She was staunchly supported by Denis Howell Pritt, K.C., a Laborite, who said that he had plenty of evidence of ill-treatment of Jews in the Polish Army, and recommended to the opposition some of the writings of David Lloyd George to see how the Polish Army treats their Jewish nationals. One thing Mr. Pritt said is worth remembering: "Unfortunately, it is quite easy to fight gallantly and ill-treat people at the same time, although it may not be the same people doing it."

Of course, the statements of Miss Rathbone and Mr. Pritt were indignantly denied by Earl Winterton. He disagreed with them and thought that their statements showed a lack of responsibility and would stir up mischief on all sides. However, the truth of their allegations is so well established as to be classified as common knowledge. It is generally believed that General Sikorski represents the enlightened section of his people and that he has done what he could to stamp out the anti-Semitic spirit which is being kept alive by the reactionary groups. However, the liberal-sounding statements which he has made about the beautiful Poland that is to be when the Nazis have been ground into the dust, have all too often been offset by anti-Semitism as expressed through numerous publications circulated among Polish soldiers on English soil.

Disgust and disbelief have been expressed over reports in the paper about these [illegible] exist and the anti-Semitic spirit behind them, notwithstanding the proclaimed purpose of this war in which Polish and Polish Jewish soldiers fight together against a common enemy. Nor it is surprising that anti-Semitism should continue. Its human containers have simply been moved to a different country and the fact that they are living temporarily in a land which thinks of itself as the cradle of liberty does not mean that they have shed their implanted prejudices. It is not nearly so surprising that the Polish Army and political leaders in exile are anti-Jewish in feeling as it would be if they were not.

After all, the present Polish soldiers grew up under a government system whose guiding principle was to exploit the masses and blame the Jews for all the resulting miseries. The calculated practice of anti-Semitism as it flourished in the "republic" of Poland could teach the world some of the finer points of keeping the populace fooled, stultified and cheated out of its share of life and living while the real robbers were calling for the "necessary" expulsion of the Jews from the country. Those who are working in full view for a "reconstituted" Poland are not working for a new and wonderful Poland where labor will know its rights and dignity and where a Jew will be on an equal footing with the most privileged. They still have not grasped the permanence of the law of change and the dreams they dream are not of the glory that could be for the many but of the glory that once was for a few. Even their fairest speeches are made with mental reservations and it may be said that they are accepted the same way by all Jewish observers except the time-serving ones who go through the outmoded diplomatic motions of of bowing right and left, empty gesture acknowledging empty gesture.

Nor is this reactionary attitude limited to the Polish group which functions in exile abroad. The Jewish underground labor movement of Poland publishes and distributes eight periodicals, believe it or not, and an organization of this movement reported recently that Nazi propaganda helps to keep anti-Semitism quite strong among the Poles, even within part of the underground Polish press. Part of this press is "anti-Semitic as it was before and approves of the extermination policy of the Nazis while deprecating their barbaric methods. Another part remains silent. Only the publications of the Polish Socialists and some of the other democratic papers are fighting anti-Semitism with determination."

The Poles want to be rid of Hitler and the Jews are one with them in that ambition. But they will not be rid of Hitlerism until that is a matter for the nations in a changed world.

"All These Wrongs Will Be Righted"

A Message From Norway

By Prime Minister Professor Johan Nygaardsvold

In democratic Norway there was never any question of distinction between the class, race or creed of Norwegian citizens. All men were equal and free to do what was right and proper.

The Jews in Norway — their numbers are not large — were never treated like their unfortunate kinfolk in Germany. They were looked upon for what they were — fellowmen, peace-loving citizens and hard workers; men and women who looked up to the Norwegian King and flag with the same love and ardour as the most loyal and patriotic citizen.

This is the land of their adoption, and now that hard times have come for Norway the Jews strive with the same patriotic endeavor to build up the Home Front as they strove to better the land in days of peace. Already some Jews have sacrificed their lives in the common fight against the enemy. They were not executed in a political purge against the Jews, but because they were men actively resisting the Germans.

There has never been a "Jewish problem" in Norway. Jews have just been part of the community. But when the German hordes forced their way into our peace-loving country, they had to find a Jewish problem. Anti-Jewish demonstrations were staged by the Germans, windows were smashed and insulting remarks were painted on the walls and windows of Jewish occupied premises. Their livelihood was taken from them, their citizenship removed; they were oppressed and starved. But they still fight on as staunchly as other patriotic Norwegians.

All these wrongs will be righted when Norway is once more a free land. The citizenship and equal rights of the Jews will be restored and, like other Norwegians, they will be helped to make good what they have suffered.

The Right To Pay Tribute To A Jew

Gerald W. Johnson found the perfect title for his beautiful and heart-warming message in the columns of The Baltimore Evening Sun recently, says the New York Times. His text was a Navy Department announcement of the kind that by now has become tragically routine. It was to the effect that Ensign Edward Irving Kohn of Baltimore was missing in action. Mr. Johnson never met the young man or any one who knew him. But he sat down and wrote a brief article for the Sunpaper, and called it "The Right to Pay Tribute."

It is an arresting title, obviously, and calculated at first reading to make the shade of the late C. C. Pinckney, who said, "Millions for defense," etc., cry out indignantly. But Mr. Johnson had in mind a different kind of tribute. He meant the right to pay tribute to a youth who had given his life for his country, even if he was a Jew.

Because, says Mr. Johnson, he is a free man in a free country he is permitted to praise the dead Ensign Kohn. If the boy "had served Germany or Italy or Spain, or even, horrible to relate, present-day France, as faithfully as he served the United States, and had been reported missing in action, it would not have been permissible for a newspaper to say one word in his honor. It is only in a free nation that a man may salute the brave and honorable no matter who they are."

Well, perhaps it was not so hard, after all, for Mr. Johnson to think of his arresting title, "The Right to Pay Tribute." It demanded to be chosen. Almost any one of us could have hit upon that title, if we had first thought of the stirring words that go with it. And while we were about it we might have also stumbled on the fact which occurred to Mr. Johnson: this right of free Americans to give honor where honor is due is chief among the things for which Americans are now fighting.

It has not always been thus in a former America and it is not always thus today, as Mr. Johnson pauses to recall. In early Massachusetts excellence dwelt only in Congregationalists and in early Maryland only Protestants were blessed. Today we have the Ku Klux, who deny that there can be any good in Jews, Catholics or Negroes.

"But so far," says Mr. Johnson, "we have managed in this country to keep this thing beaten down. We are not free of it, but at least we have driven it in lurk in holes and corners. The glory and [illegible] of America is the fact that, in theory at least, George Washington is still our leader rather than the Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan."

Such is established American practice. Under the circumstances does it really matter very much if this glory and dignity of America which put the man above the creed occasionally gets "tarnished"? Does it matter if a raucous American minority, preaching ancestral hate, makes itself heard from time to time? If in the Eighteen Fifties the Know-Nothings came and disappeared, and in the Eighteen Eighties the A.P.A. came and went, and in our own time the Ku Kluxers came and went, why aren't we justified in saying that the normal American practice is to hit bigotry on the head whenever that evil head raises itself too high and too insolently?

George Washington's greater hold on our affections as against the White Hoods and Silver Shirts is not a matter of "theory"; it is a repeatedly demonstrated fact. And if it seems too bad that we do have these recurrent eruptions of primitive mass-hate to stain the American record, one might recall what has often been said about the nature of true virtue. The really good man is not one who has never been tempted but who has met temptation and conquered it. America meets the devil hate and beats him.

If in this country of so many races and creeds no sign of discord ever manifested itself, if the new American multitudes as they poured in were greeted with 100 per cent love and kisses by their predecessors, it would be a wonderful thing, but that is the peace that broods only over Eden, and even then not permanently. For our human limitations we must be content with the fact that bigotry from time to time raises its head in America and gets smashed.

Here is how the cooler sociologist describes it:

"In their turn the cold disapproving eye has been trained on newly arrived Germans, Irish, Scandinavians, South and East Europeans. The despised alien of yesterday becomes the 100 per cent American of today and joins the native born in scorn of freshly arrived nationals."

Scorn for the newcomers? Yes. Call them, in turn, Dutchman, Mick, Jew, Wop, Hunky? Yes. But along with the scorn the first comers give the Dutchman, Jew, Catholic, Wop, Hunky a job and a home and a place in school for his children; and after a while Wops get elected to the bench and Jews become Governors; and "Whitey" Kurowski speaks over the short wave to his brother Stanley in the Army, Stanley who was born Stanislaus to Polish parents.

ZIONIST ARMY EFFORT NOT DESIRE OF ALL JEWS, STATES PUBLISHER

which not only embarrasses the United Nations, but can be diverted by the Axis in the Arab world."

"I wish I had the ability," the publisher said, "to set that problem straight and teach my fellow-Americans who are not Jews that it would be wise to examine all the facts in that complicated situation before lending their names to the extreme Zionist cause, or the demand for a Jewish army."

Mr. Sulzberger proposed that after the war there be "created a great state out of several of the countries in that section of the world" and that this state "would welcome all who wish to come."

"If I," said Mr. Sulzberger, "as a Jew, can help to impress the world that what Jews want far more than a home of their own is the right to call any place home, that in finding a new home justice must be done those who already dwell where the newcomer would live—then I believe I shall have been faithful to the tradition of justice which is my heritage as an American of Jewish faith."
